Tactic (1)

Make events more unique
by pointing out the difference between the event and the category.

Separate specific event from category
do our own homework.
Collect specific set of information about the specific event.

Independent analysis,
draw our own conclusions
based on this event's specific information.

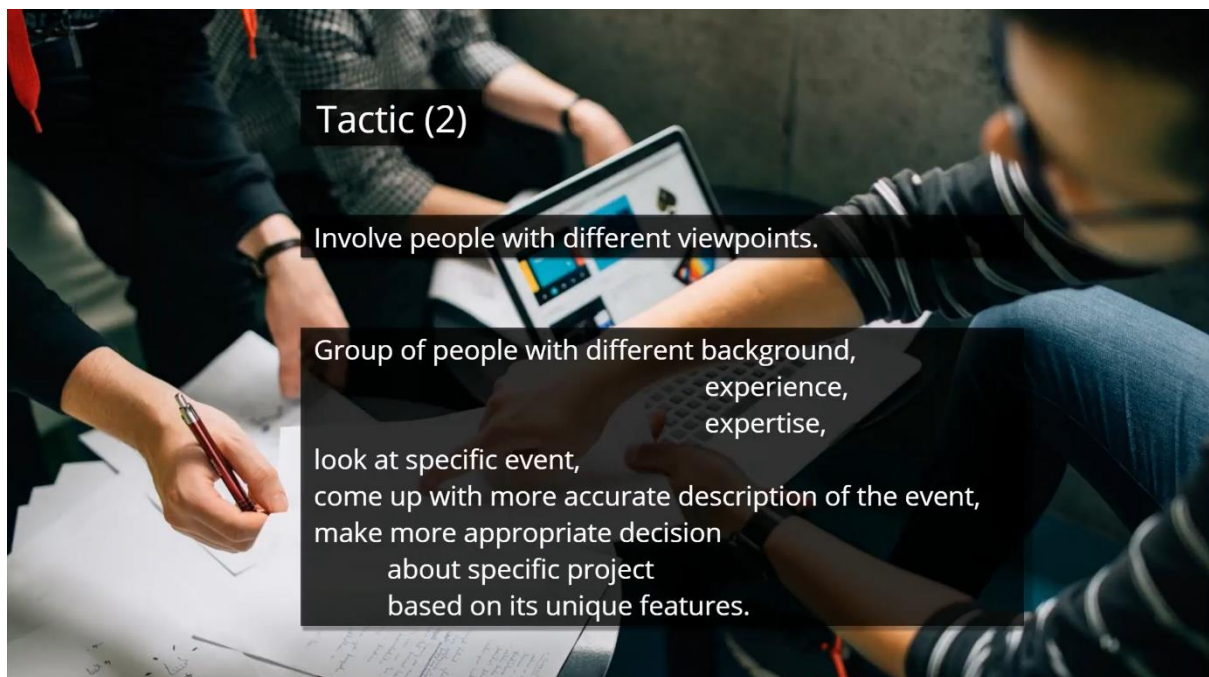

One tactic is to make events more unique by pointing out the difference between the event and the category.

To separate a specific event from the category, we need to do our own homework.

We need to collect a specific set of information about the specific event.

Do independent analysis and draw our own conclusions based on the event's specific information.

Tactic (2)

Involve people with different viewpoints.

Group of people with different background, experience, expertise, look at specific event, come up with more accurate description of the event, make more appropriate decision about specific project based on its unique features.

Another effective technique to disarm representative bias is to involve people with different viewpoints.

When a group of people with different backgrounds, experiences, and expertise look at a specific event, they come up with a more accurate description of the event and make a more appropriate decision about the specific project based on its unique features.
